SOME REMARKS ON THE CREATION AND THE TERMINATION OF A TRADE UNION

There are two critical points in the existence of each legal person - the moments of its creation and termination. The role of a legislature is to introduce legal regulations which would provide security of legal transactions (in particular, hindering the abuse of legal personality). On the other hand, the creation of a legal person of particular type cannot be impossible. In case of trade unions this issue is further enriched by the principle of unions' freedom, which speaks for the facilitating of unions' creation. When it comes to unions' termination it is required to refrain from extensive state interventionism in this regard, while allowing easy liquidation of a union by its members. The article is an attempt to approximate numerous problems relating to the creation and the termination of a union.
